Educational Specifications

Educational specifications developed cooperatively by school staff members provide a basis for designing an individual school. These specifications constitute a written communication to the architect that identifies that nature of the educational program to be served by the new building, the desired relationships among the various major areas of the building, design objectives and identification of facilities required. The educational specifications provide guidelines from which the architect can exert his creative ability, imagination, and technical and artistic skill in designing a school to optimally accommodate the desired educational program.
